ABSTRACT

UNHCR has tasked IMPACT Initiatives with conducting the Results Monitoring Survey (RMS) in Myanmar as part of its strategy to monitor and evaluate the impact of its interventions on populations of concern, including refugees, internally displaced persons, and stateless individuals. This standardized survey framework, which gathers quantitative data, aims to assess living conditions, protection status, and well-being across various regions, focusing on both directly and indirectly assisted individuals. Findings from the annual RMS help shape UNHCR's operational strategies by identifying key challenges and emerging needs, ensuring responsive, rights-based programming. Additionally, the insights from the survey support strategic planning and advocacy efforts, aligning with UNHCR's multi-year objectives and enhancing accountability to stakeholders. Following the successful implementation in 2023, the 2024 RMS will continue to inform decision-making for future programming.

Sampling

SAMPLING PROCEDURE

The data collection employs a structured quantitative household survey methodology, using stratified-random sampling for face-to-face interviews and non-probability quota sampling for remote phone-based surveys. This hybrid approach adjusts to the evolving security situation in Myanmar, with remote surveys activated in areas where in-person access is unfeasible. The target sample sizes in each township were designed based on datasets providing population estimates across each township in each of the covered states, regions and sub-regions. In total, 2,930 interviews were conducted: 1,625 with the internally displaced persons (IDP) group, 1,193 with IDP-returnees, and 112 with the non-displaced stateless population. Of these, 1858 interviews were conducted in person and 1072 remotely due to access restrictions.

WEIGHTING

Weights were calculated to adjust for differences in population sizes across various states, regions, and subregions for each population group.
